Burying 60s sing-alongs and dance crazes with waves of reverb and thud, Ty Segall is carving out his own brand of neo-psych garage alongside SF compatriots and collaborators Sic Alps and Thee Oh Sees. After clawing his way out of the Bay Area garage scene with a frantic one-man-band act that the local crowd and press couldn't get enough of, Segall has now given up the solo act for a three piece that destroys sonic and melodic boundaries with manic glee. The new live setup is a better reflection of his studio work—which generally starts with his one-man-band setup and builds from there. Exploring the space between cro-magnon fuzz and atmospheric acoustic psych, Lemons is the natural next step after his full-on self-titled 2008 debut on Caste Face.

"Look out Jay Reatard, this Bay Area one-man-band has even scuzzier static in his garage." - SPIN
